Effective Healthcare Management in the New Era

Organised by

The Institute for Health Policy & Systems Research

Objectives:

Healthcare is changing. Patient needs and expectations are shifting. Geopolitics, technology, intergeneration dynamics, capacity and financing issues will usher in new attitudes, new thinking, new practices and new delivery modalities. How can senior clinicians and healthcare managers, especially those in the front-line, effectively keep up and successfully manage the rapidly transforming landscapes and the ever demanding workplace?

Effective self and people management are key.

This fast-paced high-impact course plus an inspiring retreat offer advanced knowledge and proven tools for both upcoming and seasoned managers in healthcare, clinical or related settings to be successful and fulfilled executives of the new era, or simply for self-advancement.
